Like always, today I am again sharing my whole day experience with you. I am so happy today. It was a day of achievements and success. Our school hosted the online essay writing competition. I was initially nervous to participate in this competition. But my parents encouraged and motivated me. They told me that I have the ability to write well. I am glad that I obeyed them. I won the first prize in the essay writing competition. There were 50 participants in all. My parents also felt very proud. It was really a great experience.

Dear diary

Today I am going to share a very touching experience. I got an opportunity to visit an old age home. It is a kind of home for those old people who for some reasons cannot stay with their grown-up children or those who don't have any family member to care for them.

I felt very emotional. Me and my friends talked with them and they shared their experience with us. After talking, we played a lot of games with them. I was happy that they opened up with us. Then the time came when we have to leave them. On my way back, I was thinking that how cruel the world is , their own children left them. I have decided that I shall be visiting the old age home regularly to give company to the old people living there.
